 day while the illegal practices are being carried on.
 Five union printers and an apprentice quit their jobs on February 11, refusing to accept an offer of the publishers of $85 to $94 for a 35 hour week, averaging less than nine hours a day for the four days, with Friday, Saturday and Sunday off each week.
 The International Union representative characterized these working conditions as "inhuman."
 When the five printers quit their jobs, they were replaced by other workers and publication has continued uninterrupted. The former employees are now picketing to get their jobs back.
 The complaint filed by The Herald, which resulted in the Court's restraining order was prepared by James M. Nicolson, labor relations consultant of the Harbor Area Employers Council. Prior to engaging in private practice, Nicolson for a number of years was Regional Attorney for the National Labor Relations Board at Los Angeles.
